YOUNGER ONSET DEMENTIA KEY WORKER PROGRAM

About Younger Onset Dementia Younger onset dementia is a term used to describe the onset of symptoms of dementia before the age of 65. Based on research evidence, it is estimated that more than 26,000 people in Australia have younger onset dementia.

About The Program The National Younger Onset Dementia Key Worker Program provides individualised information and support to improve the quality of life for people with younger onset dementia. The younger onset dementia key worker acts as a primary point of contact for people with younger onset dementia, their families and carers. The key worker provides information, support, counselling, advice and helps consumers effectively engage with services appropriate to their individual needs.

This program ensures that the needs of people with younger onset dementia are being met in the community by increasing awareness and education, building capacity in the disability aged care, community and residential care sectors and improving coordination of services across agencies. Key Workers identify and address gaps in services and build capacity through consultation, networking and collaboration with service providers and consumers.

Eligibility To be eligible for the program, a person must be under the age of 65 when they first make contact with the service or enter the program. This applies to a person who has been diagnosed with younger onset dementia (all forms of), or a person with symptoms of dementia that have not yet been diagnosed.

Where a person has symptoms of dementia but has not been diagnosed, a Key Worker can assist the person in obtaining a diagnosis. People with Mild Cognitive Impairment are also eligible for the Program.

How to access key worker services The best way to access the Younger Onset Dementia Key Worker Program is to call the National Dementia Helpline on 1800 100 500.

BUNDABERG CENTRAL MENS SHED ASSOCIATION INC

Generally men are reluctant to talk about health issues and the shed atmosphere encourages them to speak to other men about this topic. By encouraging this dialogue health issues which otherwise may have been hidden by the individual will be referred to a doctor.

There are a great many talents these men have and are more than willing to pass their skills on to others in the group or community. Machines such as saws, lathes, welders and many more are at the disposal of members. Training is provided on any machinery they wish to use.

Some members would rather have a chat and a cuppa than work on machinery, this is also encouraged as this gives them a reason to come along to the shed instead of falling into depression at home. Many of our members have lost their partners and live alone.

LIFELINE

The impact of the floods on the Wide Bay region is still being felt in many unseen ways. Financially the indirect impact on our region has caused financial hardship with the closing of businesses and disruption of living arrangements. The social and emotional impact is of major concern as clients whom resided on and around the Burnett River struggle to resume lives knocked sideways by nature's unpredictable ferocity. As the year progresses, preparation for the summer season also takes precedence. An awareness of our neighbour's troubles in times of difficulties is tantamount to strengthening and sustaining a healthy community. If you are aware that someone near you is struggling with daily conflicts or impact from the floods (either financial difficulties or emotional concerns) ask them to phone UnitingCare Community during business hours on Ph. 07 4153 8400 for an appointment with a counsellor or speak with a Telephone Crisis Supporter on 131114 available 24 hours a day.

Each Regional Advisor works in a defined area which enables them to develop expert understanding of the services in their region. Regional Advisors navigate the service system for people living with MND to ensure that they are linked in to services that will meet their needs. They are assisted in their role by volunteers who follow up with clients as required.

Regional Advisors meet with newly diagnosed people and their families to provide information about the disease, offer advice and support and make an initial assessment of their specific service and support needs. WOMEN'S LEGAL SERVICES

Women's Legal Service is a specialist community legal centre providing free legal and social work services to Queensland women. We assist women in the areas of family law, child support, domestic violence and child protection, as well as providing community legal education and advocating for law reform at both a state and national level.

Women's Legal Service is committed to providing services to women in regional, rural and remote locations throughout Queensland and supporting the work of other service providers already in those areas.

To this end Women's Legal Service provides a regional, rural and remote family law and domestic violence advice line which can be reached by telephoning 1800 457 117, every Tuesday from 9:30am - 1:30pm. The line is blocked to callers ringing from within the Brisbane City Council limits, opening up the line exclusively to regional, rural and remote women.

The service is able to provide a call back facility, if a message is left, and where necessary further, lengthier telephone, Skype or face to face appointments can be made available where a need for such is identified by the Service.

Women living in regional, rural and remote communities are also able to seek assistance through our general family law advice telephone line, 1800 677 278 or 07 3392 0670 between 9.30am - 1.00pm each Monday, Tuesday and Thursday and between 1:00pm - 4:00pm each Wednesday.

In addition, Women's Legal Service continues to provide support to regional, rural and remote women through the provision of online resources. We are pleased to announce a new website for the Service is now "live". The site, www.wlsq.org.au, contains extensive resources, links, news and information about how Women's Legal Service can provide assistance.

Women's Legal Service is also pleased to announce that our 9th edition of "Separation, a Legal Resource" is now available. The publication has undergone extensive rewriting in line with legislative changes. The new publication, steps women through the key legal and welfare issues involved in separation. A free e-book version is available for download via the Women's Legal Service website in the resources section, the link to which is as follows: <http://www.wlsq.org.au/resources/legal-toolkit/>.

Women's Legal Service also regularly delivers free community legal education seminars covering a range of topics around domestic violence and family law at the request of service providers. Women's Legal Service recognises that community legal education is a crucial part of ensuring that our Service reaches as many Queensland women as we possibly can.
